Library to Receive Innovation Studios Equipment

Thanks to the input of several people and organizations in the community, the Nebraska Library Commission has selected the Plattsmouth Library to participate in the Library Innovation Studios Project! That means that the library will be receiving a 3D printer, laser cutter, vinyl cutter, CNC router, embroidery machine, Arduino, Makey Makey, soldering machine, video creating equipment, and more for a period of 20 weeks. The equipment is tentatively scheduled to arrive in October or November.

This three-year project was made possible with a grant of $530,732 from the Institute of Museum and Library Services awarded to the Nebraska Library Commission in partnership with University of Nebraska—Lincoln, Nebraska Innovation Studio, Nebraska Extension, and Regional Library Systems. The project allows small libraries to use a variety of equipment to determine the need and interest in the community. At the end of the project, the library will evaluate what has garnered the most interest and plan to acquire that equipment on a permanent basis.

More information on the project can be found on the NLC website <http://nlc.nebraska.gov/grants/InnovationStudios/>. If interested in being trained on the equipment, please contact Karen Mier at 402-296-4154 x23 or via email at kmier@plattsmouth.org.

Ancient Roman Religion and Nebraska Football

Presented by

PROFESSOR

Department of Art and Art History at the University of Nebraska—Lincoln

Thursday, September 14
6:30 pm

Hoff will share insights on how NU's football program, like ancient Roman religion, is an institution that binds together the different populations within the state.

The Solar Eclipse is History

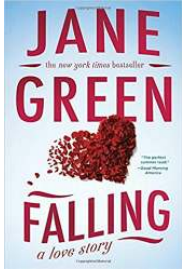

We hope that most of you were able to enjoy watching the solar eclipse on August 19. The library handed out 1500 glasses, 490 of which went to the schools in town to allow their students to safely view the eclipse. Of the 1500 glasses, 1000 came through a grant from STAR_Net, a collaboration with the National Science Foundation, NASA, Google, and the Gordon and Betty Moore Foundation. An additional 100 came from the Nebraska Library Commission, and the library purchased 400.

When Emma Montague left the strict confines of upper-crust British life for New York, she felt sure it would make her happy. Away from her parents and expectations, she felt liberated, throwing herself into Manhattan life replete with a high-paying job, a gorgeous apartment, and a string of successful boyfriends. But the cutthroat world of finance and relentless pursuit of more began to take its toll. This wasn't the life she wanted, either.

On the move again, Emma settles in the picturesque waterfront town of Westport, Connecticut, a world apart from both England and Manhattan. It is here that she begins to confront what it is she really wants from her life. With no job, and knowing only one person in town, she channels her passion for creating beautiful spaces into remaking the dilapidated cottage she rents from Dominic, a local handyman who lives next door with his six-year-old son.

Unlike any man Emma has ever known, Dominic is confident, grounded, and committed to being present for his son, whose mother fled shortly after he was born. They become friends, and slowly much more, as Emma finds herself feeling at home in a way she never has before.

But just as they start to imagine a life together as a family, fate intervenes in the most shocking of ways. For the first time, Emma has to stay and fight for what she loves, for the truth she has discovered about herself, or risk losing it all.

The spectacular finale to the New York Times bestselling trilogy that began with Mr. Mercedes (winner of the Edgar Award) and Finders Keepers.

In End of Watch, the diabolical "Mercedes Killer" drives his enemies to suicide, and if Bill Hodges and Holly Gibney don't figure out a way to stop him, they'll be victims themselves.

In Room 217 of the Lakes Region Traumatic Brain Injury Clinic, something has awakened. Something evil. Brady Hartsfield, perpetrator of the Mercedes Massacre, where eight people were killed and many more were badly injured, has been in the clinic for five years, in a vegetative state. According to his doctors, anything approaching a complete recovery is unlikely. But behind the drool and stare, Brady is awake, and in possession of deadly new powers that allow him to wreak unimaginable havoc without ever leaving his hospital room.

Retired police detective Bill Hodges, the unlikely hero of Mr. Mercedes and Finders Keepers, now runs an investigation agency with his partner, Holly Gibney—the woman who delivered the blow to Hartsfield's head that put him on the brain injury ward. When Bill and Holly are called to a suicide scene with ties to the Mercedes Massacre, they find themselves pulled into their most dangerous case yet, one that will put their lives at risk, as well as those of Bill's heroic young friend Jerome Robinson and his teenage sister, Barbara. Brady Hartsfield is back, and planning revenge not just on Hodges and his friends, but on an entire city.

In End of Watch, Stephen King brings the Hodges trilogy to a sublimely terrifying conclusion, combining the detective fiction of Mr. Mercedes and Finders Keepers with the heart-pounding, supernatural suspense that has been his bestselling trademark. The result is an unnerving look at human vulnerability and chilling suspense. No one does it better than King.

Two Early “Europeans” on the Platte

Harlan Seyfer, Plattsmouth National Historic District Historian

When Etienne Vénaird, sieur de Bourgmont, arrived at the Mouth of the Platte on June 16, 1714, he became the first European known to set foot in the future state of Nebraska. Although there is no documentation of such, it is unlikely he traveled alone. He needed a crew of experienced boatmen. Frank Norall, in his book Bourgmont: Explorer of the Missouri, notes that Bourgmont had the support of wealthy Lamothe Cadillac (founder of Fort Detroit, hence the car’s namesake). So the financial backing was present to hire a crew for a substantial expedition. But, as noted, sadly no one else is mentioned, even in the two reports about the trip that Bourgmont sent back to France. However, there may have been Europeans who preceded Bourgmont to the Platte, but who simply left no trace of their foray.

After Bourgmont, it wasn’t until 1720 that the next European is known to have reached the Platte. Their Indian allies soon brought the Spanish in Santa Fe the news. Worse yet – from the Spanish viewpoint – a stream of rumors of Frenchmen incursions on the plains began to trickle in. In 1717, during an entrada to El Cuartelejo in today’s western Kansas, the Spanish found trade goods of clearly European (i.e., French) origin. (El Cuartelejo, Spanish for “far district,” is the northernmost pueblo and the only pueblo in Kansas.) In El Cuartelejo, the Spanish were shown a Paloma Apache Indian who reportedly had been shot by a Kansas Indian with a European firearm. Other Palomas told the Spanish that the French had established settlements on a large east-flowing river north of their Kansas enemies.

Alarmed, Antonio Valverde, the governor of Nuevo México, wasted no time writing the Viceroy of Nueva España in Mexico City, “The French have their settlement on a very large river which here is known as the Jesús María.” The Río Jesús María, some historians speculate, is the Platte or South Platte River.

To counter this perceived French threat, Governor Valverde ordered his Vice-Governor Don Pedro de Villasur to conduct a reconnaissance in force north of El Cuartelejo. Villasur’s well documented expedition in search of French “intruders” is the first known arrival of the Spanish in today’s Nebraska. Unfortunately, from his point of view, Villasur and his companions – most of whom are identified by name in later reports – were attacked by Otoe and Pawnee Indians and nearly wiped out near the confluence of the Loup and Platte Rivers.

Typical Appearance of Bourgmont Expedition Member

An aside: Among the dead was José Naranjo, Villasur's chief guide. Naranjo was 25% African and 75% Hopi Indian. Highly esteemed by the Spanish, Naranjo was well integrated into Spanish culture; he married a Spanish lady and became a wealthy landowner. Governor Valverde – in his report to the Viceroy mentioned above – wrote that Naranjo had discovered the Jesús María. Alas, this is the only known mention of Naranjo's achievement, and the conjecture that the Río Jesús María is the Platte River remains today just that – conjecture.

We must look to Bourgmont again for the next Europeans on the Platte. Villasur's 1720 foray was in part a response to receiving word of Bourgmont's 1714 arrival at the mouth of the Platte. When the French in Louisiana heard of Villasur's disaster on the Platte, their response was to recall Bourgmont from his retirement in France to lead an expedition in 1724 into today's western Kansas.

The primary purpose of the expedition was to establish an alliance with the Plains Apaches.

The journal of the Bourgmont expedition appears to have been kept by the mining engineer, Philippe de La Renaudière, who accompanied Bourgmont. (We use the translation of the journal by Frank Norall.) The opening entry (dated 25 June 1724) notes that five Canadians accompanied the expedition, one of which was Quesnel, an army doctor.

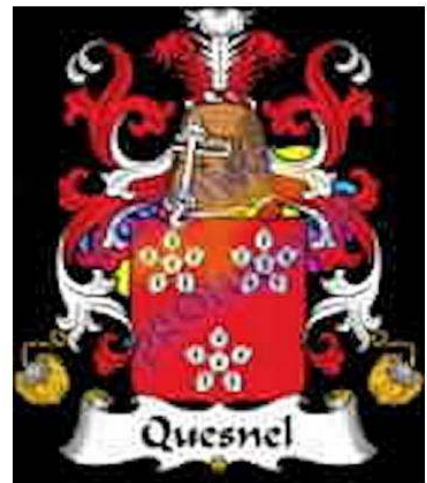

On July 24, Renaudière recorded,
 At four in the morning M[onsieur] de Bourgmont sent M[onsieur] Quesnel, Canadian, with two Kansa Indians to go to the Otos to invite the head chief of that tribe to come with a band of his warriors to join him on the expedition to the Padoucas.

At that time the Otoe Indians were living on Salt Creek near the Platte River.

The journal entry for October 4 reads
 Sieur Quesnel, the Canadian, has arrived ... from the Otos, where M. de Bourgmont had sent him to request the head chief to join him at the Kansa village. He brought with him another seven war chiefs of this [the Oto] tribe, who arrived with their peace calumets [ceremonial pipes].

After the expedition returned, twelve expedition members signed the journal, testifying to its accuracy. Curiously, one of those signatures is spelled "quenel" with no capitalization. Is this Quesnel? Noted Missouri historian Millard Stipes thought so, when he transcribed "quenel" as "Quesnel" in his book on the Bourgmont expedition through Kansas.

From all of this, we can gather that Quesnel was well educated and trusted by Bourgmont, even if his full name is given nowhere in the journal. However, on the Ancestry.com message board, it is speculated that this is Raymond Quesnel, born in Montreal 1697. No more information on Quesnel is forthcoming. He disappears into the fog of time.
